

SailFish 3000 Weekender

If you've ever wondered where the 'real boats' have gone, or perhaps pondered why the white boat manufacturers don't seem to build boats for people with less than a lazy million or three in the bank, here's proof that we can still unearth really good value, beautifully built craft where you don't have to be embarrassed by stowing the crab pots in the cockpit, or freak out when the grandkids play 'chasings' around the dinette - or worse, worry when the little 'dears' climb up on the roof and use it as a dive platform . . . this is one of the best family boats we've encountered in a long time. It is particularly well priced, performs superbly and is easily capable of sustaining the mob on that long dreamed of trip through the Whitsundays. Read on . .

