

Horizon 575 Diesel W/Around

Introducing one of the most significant trailerboats that has been released in Australia in several years – kid you not.

This is the first of the new next generation trailerboats utilising diesel power, and whilst that may not be very interesting yet for the majority of recreational boat users, already the semi-professional and professional charter market is starting to push towards the fuel efficiency, reliability and safety of diesel.

It is deeply significant that scarcely any of the GRP trailerboat builders in Australia offer a diesel sterndrive – so it's doubly significant that this relatively small family business has had the initiative, courage and foresight to work closely with several of their dealers around Australia (and in this particular case, their Darwin dealer) to develop this remarkable craft.

It's not remarkable because it has a diesel – there have been plenty of diesel boats built over the years, but what is remarkable is the level of performance, the ease of installation and the overall harmony of the (Cont)
