

Lessons From Ten Trips To The Territory's Top Rivers

A man with a beard and a straw hat is smiling and holding a large, silvery barramundi fish. He is wearing a blue button-down shirt. The background is a blurred natural setting with green foliage.

“The strike. It’s the strike more than anything that turns me on to barramundi. It’s one of those seemingly inexplicable sensations, that seeps into your very soul and touches those private parts of your memory usually reserved for intimate thoughts.”

Story & Pics By Mike O’Neil