

Kingswoods, Hills Hoists, Vegemite & Half Cabs: Quintessential Australians!

Without doubt, GRP half cabs and cuddies have been the mainstay of the Australian recreational boating world for decades. Thousands of boats have been built through the years, from boat brands that were household names in years gone by. In this special report, Editor Peter Webster, one of the handful of boating journalists who were there when it all began in the late 1960s, looks at the reasons why this particular size has remained on top of the sales charts ever since. And more importantly perhaps, why they will continue to stay there in the foreseeable future.
